LUNCH MENU

The name Kloppenheim is derived from a small village about 30km from Wiesbaden in Germany.

The significance of the name is that the developer was born in Kloppenheim before immigrating to South Africa.

Kloppenheim's existence can be traced back to the year 800. During the period 800 A.D – 927 A.D a German clan called Franken inhabited the area in and around the village.

Kloppenheim, as the village was then known, may have had its original name from a dialect spoken by a Franken clan. Most of the villages and towns occupied by the Franken clan named their villages and towns with a word ending in "heim", meaning "home".

However, the more popular belief is that the word "clop" comes from the Middle High German language meaning "rock" (felsen). The direct translation would therefore be "home of the rock".
